Rhododendrons and Azaleas - Spring 2009

Rhododendrons require moist, free-draining, lime-free soil. Most prefer a situation in semi-shade, although there are a number of varieties that will thrive in an open site. Generally, the larger the leaf, the more shade the plant will require.

The compact and dwarf hybrids can be grown in containers where ideal soil conditions can be provided by using ericaceous compost. They are also well suited to growing in rockeries and among heathers. The small leaved forms will tolerate sunny situations.

The height given is the approximate height after 10 years. The month is the usual flowering time. Unless stated otherwise, all listed are hardy in the British Isles.

S / O indicates sold out.

Yakushmanum Hybrids

Rhododendron yakushmanum is a remarkable species only found growing on the windswept mountain peaks of Yakushima Island, Japan. It forms a compact, dome shaped shrub up to 1.3m. high with silvery new growth and bell-shaped flowers, rose-pink in bud which open pale pink and fade to white.

The leaves are glossy green above and have dense brown indumentum beneath.

It is the parent of many new hybrids, some of which are listed below.

Indumentum is a naturally occurring, attractive, woolly or hairy covering on the leaves of some Rhododendrons. It can be on the upper or lower surface of the leaves and sometimes on both.

Colours range from silvery-white to cinnamon-brown.

'Amity'	1.0m. May. Rose-pink with red speckles. Attractive silvery new foliage.	7 litre	£ 21.00
'Dreamland'	1.2m. May. Masses of pale pink flowers with deeper edges.	7 litre	£ 21.00
